MARCH 2015

Taylor Elementary Hosts Breakfast Month Kick-off

JACKSONVILLE, AR (March 3, 2015)—The Arkansas No Kid Hungry campaign and Midwest Dairy Council kicked off Arkansas School Breakfast Month at Taylor Elementary School in Jacksonville. Taylor is an Arkansas Meals for Achievement school that serves Breakfast in the Classroom to all of their students every morning. When asked what she likes best about the program, one 5th grader said, "I get to eat breakfast with my friends." A kindergartener said, "I like it because it's fun." According to Principal Myeisha Haywood, "Everything about this program works for my students."

Miss Teen International, Blair Wortsmith, was on hand to tell the kids that, as a student herself, eating a good breakfast is critical to keeping up with her studies and fulfilling her busy schedule as Miss Teen International. Blair supported Breakfast in the Classroom as a great way for kids to Fuel Their Greatness!

As part of the month-long celebration, the Arkansas No Kid Hungry campaign and Midwest Dairy Council will be sponsoring the Arkansas Breakfast Challenge, which offers new grant dollars and incentives to help schools adopt Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs. Schools can apply for the Arkansas Breakfast Challenge through May 1, 2015.

Complete the USDA Farm to School Census

It's time to complete the second biennial USDA Farm to School Census!

Back in 2013 we learned that more than 40,000 schools, serving 23.5 million students, were “bringing the farm to school.” A lot can change in two years and we're excited to receive updated information through the 2015 USDA Farm to School Census.

Go to <https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/2015F2SCensus>.

Please complete the questionnaire even if you are not currently purchasing any locally produced food or participating in farm to school by May 29, 2015.

Farm to School Regional Workshops Planned

The Arkansas Children's Hospital Childhood Obesity Prevention Research Program and the Arkansas Grow Healthy team are excited to announce Farm to School Regional Workshops that will be available to schools, farmers and community partners in the fall of 2015. Participants can expect to learn how to menu, procure, market, and prepare local foods in schools. There will be business and production planning for farmers, and food safety training for schools and farmers.

Farm Tour in Newport

Arkansas Child Nutrition Directors and school foodservice staff are invited to tour Berries by Bill in Newport, Arkansas on April 13th at 2:00 PM. The program will include a walking tour of fields to see strawberry blooms, and freshly planted watermelon and sweet corn plants. After the tour there will be a meeting with owner Bill Landreth to discuss the variety of strawberries he grows, his food safety precautions, ordering/shipping methods for his farm, and fresh produce availability. The farm is located off of exit 83 on Highway 67 North in Newport, AR. Contact Andrew Carberry for more information—(501) 364-6555.

Arkansas School Breakfast Month

Legislators, educators and hunger relief advocates support the importance of Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs.

LITTLE ROCK, AR (March 1, 2015)- Legislators, hunger relief advocates and educators gathered in the Old Supreme Court Chambers of the Arkansas Capitol today to proclaim March as Arkansas School Breakfast Month.

A common theme ran through the remarks of Sen. Gary Stubblefield, Sen. Bobby Pierce, Rep. Eddie Armstrong and Rep. Charles Blake, all of whom spoke at today's event. As staunch supporters of Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs and Arkansas Meals for Achievement legislation, all recognized from personal experience that when we give our children what they need to grow and learn, we are giving them a chance to achieve more than they might otherwise. School breakfast is integral to helping children focus and learn. "This is a great program," said Senator Stubblefield, "and I hope it will continue forever."

Educators Agree

Breakfast in the Classroom, Grab & Go and Second Chance breakfast models all take breakfast out of the cafeteria and make it part of the school day. While teachers were skeptical about the model, Principal Mellor says now, "Teachers can't imagine their days without Breakfast in the Classroom. It sets a good tone for the whole day."

Principal Mellor also shared the positive effects he is seeing in his school as a result of starting a Breakfast in the Classroom program. Schools like Daisy Bates Elementary School, that have Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs in place, are reporting increases in the numbers of eligible students who are eating breakfast, and that means more federal child nutrition reimbursement dollars to schools. "We're seeing more of our kids eating breakfast," Mellor said, "and I think that's why some of the discipline has improved and why attendance has improved. Our breakfast participation is up over 100% so we actually have more kids that come in for breakfast than we do for school lunch, and that's pretty phenomenal."

That the No Kid Hungry Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs are showing good results overall for Arkansas students is clear from the recent School Breakfast Scorecard: 2013-2014, a study by the Food Research and Action Center. Arkansas went from 12th to 10th in the nation in eligible students that are participating school breakfast.

A month-long celebration

The Arkansas No Kid Hungry campaign and Midwest Dairy Council will be sponsoring the Arkansas Breakfast Challenge, which offers new grant dollars and incentives to help schools adopt Breakfast-After-the-Bell programs. Schools can apply for the Arkansas Breakfast Challenge through May 1, 2015.

There will also be an Orange Squeeze Photo Contest. Child Nutrition Directors from across the state will be sending creative photos of their students eating fresh oranges for breakfast on March 6th. The school with the most creative photo will receive a $1,500 cash prize, second place will receive $1,000 and the third place winner will receive $500.

Fayetteville Public Schools

In an attempt to serve more local foods and meet the red/orange vegetable meal pattern requirement, Fayetteville Public Schools (FPS) now serves local Sweet Potato Cuts. This product has replaced sweet potato fries on the menu because its lower in fat and calories and better accepted by students. The sweet potato chunks are peeled, chopped, and IQF to reduce preparation time and make them easy to store; this product is an easy way to start purchasing local products for a farm to school program. FPS serves this product in the winter when fresh, local product is very limited. In the pictures you will see the frozen product, finished product on a tray, and signage used to promote the local item. A simple recipe is used: coat cuts with oil, salt, and pepper and roast in the oven.

Consider trying this local product or others that are available from your local distributor or local farmer!
